

Market today: Recovery efforts

(Phuong Nguyen – phuong.nh@vdsc.com.vn)

- Although there were weak developments during the session, the market still made efforts to maintain the pace of recovery.
- With a stable condition and gradually increasing support cash flow, it is likely that the market will overcome the resistance area of 1,105 points and extend the recovery period in the near future.

Despite the green color at the beginning of the session, the market was still cautious and retreated, and at the same time, developments continued to be quiet with low liquidity. The state of hesitation and tension prevailed during the session, and developments only got better at the end of the session. VN index gained 0.63 points (+0.06%) and closed at 1,103.06 points. Matching liquidity increased slightly with 496.3 million shares matched on HOSE.

The VN30 group gained 0.02 points (+0.0%) to close at 1,097.45 points. In the group, there were 9 gainers such as STB (+2.3%), GVR (+1.8%), BID (+1.6%), HDB (+1.1%), VJC (+0.9%) ... On the contrary, there were 14 losers, such as BVH (-1.1%), MSN (-1.1%), SAB (-0.8%), MWG (-0.7%), HPG (-0.6%) ...

With the market's efforts to recover at the end of the session, some industry groups maintained the green color and helped to balance the market. The movements of industry groups generally do not have strong fluctuations. Although the Banking group rose slightly, it had an impact on supporting the market.

Foreign investors continued to be net sellers on HOSE with a value of VND507.6 billion. In particular, they sold heavily on HPG (-93.4 billion), VND (-79.5 billion), MSN (-67.1 billion), SSI (-42.9 billion), VPB (-41.5 billion) ... Meanwhile, MWG (+54.8 billion), HDB (+23.2 billion), BID (+19.3 billion), FTS (+16.1 billion), NKG (+16 billion) were the top buying names.

Although there were weak developments during the session, the market still made efforts to maintain the pace of recovery. Liquidity is still low, but increased compared to the previous session, showing that support cash flow has improved while supply has not caused much pressure. Selling pressure comes mainly from foreign investors. With a stable condition and gradually increasing support cash flow, it is likely that the market will overcome the resistance area of 1,105 points and extend the recovery period in the near future. However, this recovery factor is still temporary and short-term, so the market has more time to retest the supply at higher resistance levels such as the 1,120 area. Therefore, investors can expect the recovery period to be extended, and at the same time consider short-term buying in some stocks that have recently formed a basis for accumulation. In the short term, however, investors should use the rally to take profits or rebalance their portfolios.

Technical Analyst Recommendations

The market continues to make efforts to maintain recovery. With a stable state and gradually increasing support cash flow, it is likely that the market will surpass the 1,105 point area and expand its recovery in the near future. However, this recovery factor is still short-term so the market has more time to re-test supply at higher resistance levels such as the 1,120 point area. Therefore, investors can expect the possibility of extending the recovery period, and at the same time consider short-term buying in some stocks that have created an accumulation base recently. However, in the short term, you should still take advantage of the recovery to take profits or restructure your portfolio.
